The Committee on Interdisciplinary Studies provides a framework for supporting innovative, boundary-crossing inquiry among students and faculty across campus. To this end the Committee coordinates the efforts of existing multidisciplinary programs and provides guidance and support as new programs are envisioned and established.

The boundaries between disciplines form a fertile ground for creative and innovative research. New knowledge grows in these developing and interstitial fields that often does not fit easily into the standard demarcations of academic departments. While the disciplines have their role to play, future scholarship will depend in part on shifting configurations of resources. This type of scholarship asks questions that draw on established bodies of thought while reworking certain connections and concerns in order to explore vibrant and valuable new areas.

The American Indian Studies minor will provide students with academic experiences, skills, and strategies to understand the scope of American indigenous communities within scholarly and applied contexts. After completion of the minor, graduates will have received an academic background that will prepare them for relevant employment in tribal governments and other Indian organizations, state or federal agencies which serve Indian tribes and organizations. Graduates will have received the basic knowledge and analytical skills to enable them to pursue graduate degrees in fields related to American Indian Studies. The American Indian Studies minor will emphasize the traditional acquisition of knowledge and skills that apply to American Indian communities, a vital sense of service to these communities, and an enthusiastic pursuit of what these communities can contribute to the academy in knowledge, methods, and ethics.

American Studies is an interdisciplinary approach to the study of American cultures. Through examination of historical, religious, and literary texts, political institutions, popular culture, film, art, and the physical landscape, students will explore how Americans create meaning in their lives and make sense of the world in which they live. By encouraging students to approach the knowledge and skills they are mastering as part of their major from the perspective of other disciplines, American Studies courses will foster deeper critical thinking and broader contextualization. Thus an American Studies minor will offer students a strong complement to a wide variety of majors—an additional course of study that will help them to balance the focus of a traditional discipline with the fresh insights and breadth of interdisciplinary approaches.

Deaf Studies is an interdisciplinary field that draws on work from a variety of academic disciplines including anthropology, history, linguistics, interpretation and translation, education, psychology, sociology, public administration, political science, social work, philosophy, ethics, art, literature, and American Sign Language (ASL) instruction. Students will examine elements of what culturally-Deaf people in America have traditionally called "the Deaf-World" with special attention to the framework of meaning from within which culturally-Deaf people interpret what it means to be Deaf. The interdisciplinary nature of Deaf Studies courses challenges students to approach cultural descriptions critically. The Deaf Studies minor offers students a strong complement to a wide variety of majors. Students who earn this minor will find increased employability in a range of professions.

The minor in Deaf Studies provides students with a historical, cultural, and linguistic foundation. From this foundation the minor prepares students to become certified interpreters, to become ASL and Deaf studies teachers, to pursue graduate work in deaf education and a variety of other disciplines, and to engage in any number of professional fields related to deafness.

Environmental Studies is premised on the idea that nature and culture are inextricably linked. Nature provides the context in which "culture" is constructed, and culture acts as a lens through which humans define "nature."

Environmental Studies challenges students to examine both the ecological and social underpinnings of environmental issues and the complex interplay between natural and social systems, from local to global scales. Since humans are integral parts of ecological systems, an understanding of the biosphere must include studies in both the humanities and natural science. Knowledge of the structure and function of natural systems is crucial, as well as an understanding of the ways culture affects the way we perceive nature. In this way, Environmental Studies is built upon the liberal arts.

A Minor in Environmental Studies is useful for students seeking academic or professional paths in public policy on the environment. Hundreds of thousands of environmental professionals work for government agencies at local, state, and federal levels. Tens of thousands of jobs become annually available in both the public and private sectors.

An emphasis in Environmental Studies is also available. See Integrated Studies for details.

The Gender Studies minor allows students to study the extent to which gender and gender relations are socially influenced. Students will examine the ways in which conceptions of masculinity and femininity directly impact social and political institutions and practices, cultural expressions (such as art, communication, media, literature, music, and film), law, education, business, scientific inquiry, interpersonal relations, sexuality and family. As an interdisciplinary program, the Gender Studies minor encourages students to examine gender from multiple academic perspectives. As such, the minor broadens students' understanding of their chosen major and career path while facilitating the recognition of gender dynamics in their own lives.

Peace and Justice Studies at UVSC takes an interdisciplinary approach to the study of phenomena empirically and theoretically associated with violence/nonviolence and injustice/justice. Four areas of concentration are offered: 1) Peace, 2) Justice, 3) Mediation and Conflict Resolution, 4) Philosophy and Religion. Although organized into concentrations, the curricula must also be approached in a way that disallows the student from studying within one concentration only (note the accent on interdisciplinary). Peace and nonviolence are investigated at multiple levels from the realm of the personal and familial, to international structures, conventions, institutions, and history. Likewise, justice and injustice are interrogated across the same range of inquiry. Because matters of peace and justice are of perennial- and perhaps growing-concern, students who earn a Peace and Justice Studies minor will place themselves in a multi-faceted market of career opportunities including law, social work, counseling, mediation and conflict resolution, development, diplomacy, nonprofit management, education, various forms of government employment, and more.

The Religious Studies Program is an interdisciplinary approach to the academic study of religion. Due to its influential role at the local, national, and international level, religion requires careful study utilizing academic methods employed in the examination of other cultural institutions. This includes the study of the history, theology, literature, folklore, etc. of various religions in an effort to study religion as a cultural phenomenon. The program is intended to serve our students and community by deepening our understanding of religious beliefs and practices in a spirit of open inquiry. Its aim is neither to endorse nor to undermine the claims of religion, but to create an environment in which various issues can be engaged from a variety of perspectives and methodologies. A Religious Studies minor will complement a variety of majors and contribute to a well-rounded educational experience by exposing students to multiple disciplines.
